The 1997 Federal Guidebook Updated on the Web

To respond to requests by subscribers of The Federal Guidebook, J-K Carruthers Limited will be publishing quarterly updates of the senior personnel listings in The Federal Guidebook on the Web. This new exclusive service will allow subscribers to deal with the continued high rate of change among senior bureaucrats and the many reorganizations which take place each year.

The Web version of the Federal Guidebook 1997 will be available starting September 1, 1997 at the Carruthers Communications website (www.carruthers.com). An annual password (good for the period September 1, 1997 through August 30, 1998) is required to be able to download the updates as they become available.

The Web updates are published in electronic, full-text Adobe Acrobat (.pdf) format, for easy downloading via web browsers and later printing on postscript printers. The service provides the extra convenience of being able to download only those chapters that you need.

The updates incorporate changes in senior government personnel that occur after the book is published each fall. We will do a complete update each quarter of all the senior personnel listings; changes at the Ministerial and Deputy Ministerial levels will be posted as they occur. The date of the postings of updates are noted at the web site, so that subscribers know when the latest revisions of each chapter were made.

Multiple electronic distribution licences are also available for LAN distribution of the electronic files; contact us for more information.

If you:

- are going to a meeting with federal officials and not sure who will be at the table opposite...
- are trying to keep up with the constant organization changes in Ottawa...
- need a fax number for a senior official quickly...
- want to track down an official you have previously dealt with...

then you need The Federal Guidebook on the Web!
